The .EGLEUCO. originates from the famous aigleucos, the sparkling wine mentioned by Virgilio, that was produced not only in Rome, but also in Greece and in the Narbonese province. It appears that since the fall of the Roman Empire till the end of the XVII century, there were no known sparkling wines, until in 1600, when it was .reinvented. by the benedettini monks. The traces of its rebirth can also be found in dutch paintings, in which a champagne glass filled with a sparkling liquid is depicted, and in particular, a Rembrandt painting from 1650, displayed in the art gallery of Dresda. This typology of sweet sparkling wine, as in the Roman time, lasted for a long time, practically until the end of the year 1800, when it was transformed into that dry fresh and elegant wine, that we all appreciate today. Therefore, the evolution happened beginning with an Extra Dry Falanghina to a Brut Falanghina sparkling wine.

Colore giallo paglierino scarico, con riflessi verdolino chiari. Perlage morbido e fine. Sentore fruttato e floreale di fiori gialli con richiami al minerale. Al palato fresco e sapido. Eccellente aperitivo e perfetto con crostacei, frutti di mare, risotti e pizza. Temperatura di servizio: 8–9 °C.

The "Masseria Vigne Vecchie" organic winery is born in Sannio, in Solopaca (BN), in 2005 as an agricultural cooperative. In 2016, thanks to love and the passion for organic wine products, is detected by the family Carnation. Already established in modern glass business, it acquires fourteen hectares of land intended to preserve organic farming. Therefore, create one line of organic wines called "Samnes" in an attempt to claim and make known their roots helping to spread culture and love for their land. Which, in this case is so grateful that he returns, every year, giving those wonderful fruits from which wine is produced. The dedication to the arts and to the literature leads to the birth of "Samnes", a novel of the same name, which tells the story of the Ancient Sannio and the origins of the Samnite Wine.
